“YOU BELONG TO THE STATION”

(With apologies to Glenn Frey)

By Barry Sigismondi 1/1/11

The Sun comes up on Nyack my friend
You're trying to make some money all over again.
You're tradin' the Kodak at least one more climb
You know you can nail it for thousands this time

The office door opens your desk is a mess
The mic has been moved and you're under duress
The futures are running, it's time to make hay
But what's with the mixer, the knobs are astray
Nobody knows what has happened
Nobody knows what's been done

You belong to the station,
You are here for the fight
You're livin' in a river of money,
The stochastics are right

Brian's still in the corner
Posting the trades of the day
Johnny's making money like crazy
Dawit's lost.....MIA

When you asked for breakfast you were on the run
Trying to make big money, just for the fun
Now he's late again, your fuel's running low
How is this possible, why is he slow?
The restaurant place is just next door
How could this be he's still gone?

You belong to the station,
You are here for the fight
You're livin' in a mansion of moola,
Oh, that wedge fall is tight

Your research makes us wealthy
Your skills block our defeat
You're our mentor of Trading
You're the man with the beat.

You can feel it, you can taste it
It's getting nearer, you can make it,
You can smell it, but it's cold now
Egg is soggy, bacon old now,
You belong to the station,
You are here day and night
You belong to the station,
You're the man with the might
You belong, you belong
